1. In early April 1952, an antiaircraft gun emplacement was observed west of the Ruse Winter Harbor, on the banks of the Danube. It consisted of two antiaircraft guns located approximately 20 meters apart, and one range finder. The caliber of the guns was estimated at approximately 80 mm. and their barrels were slightly shorter than those of the former German 88 mm. gun. The range finder base was approximately one meter square. An additional antiaircraft battery was located on a small hill south of the Winter Harbor, and consisted of two guns and a range finder.
2. On 8 April 1952, fifteen gunboats, approximately 10 to 12 meters long, were observed in the Winter Harbor. They were equipped with a revolving turret in the middle. [REDACTED] 25X1
3. Harbor workers stated that a Bulgarian naval school was located in Ruse. Students of this school wore blue uniforms with a white belt, red collar patches, silver-bordered epaulets, and blue visor-type caps.
